DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1-30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Makivic (US Patent No. 6,061,662).

As per claims 1-30, Makivic discloses the claimed invention as Makivic discloses a system and system for the valuation of derivative financial instruments. The system comprises determining of price sensitivities for a practical trading or hedging strategy so as to win an auction. Makivic states that “An online option pricing service is a component of the resource center, at the core of which is a Monte Carlo simulation algorithm... Furthermore, option values and sensitivities can be computed for multiple values of parameters in a single simulation which is a feature not replicatable by any other known method. This is useful for risk management purposes, where multiple scenarios may be superimposed on top of option valuation to establish best/worst case exposures and other risk assessment tasks mandated by internal policies or regulators. The algorithm is also a valuable tool for sell-side firm, where it can be used as a flexible engine for the valuation or exotic one-of-a-kind derivative instruments". Applicant is directed to column 3, lines 38-62, column 5, lines 26-39 and column 8, lines 5-25.

Makivic further teaches the step of codifying at least one of potential competition, market forces, forecasted budgets, priorities, risk and return tradeoffs into a preference matrix and codifying past bidding history of competing bidders based upon knowledge of tranche types preferred by competing bidders. Applicant is directed to column 2, line 58 to column 3, line 31.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

2. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

The basis of this rejection is set forth in a two prong test of:

- (1) whether the invention is within the technological arts; and
- (2) whether the invention produces a useful, concrete and tangible result.

For a claimed invention to be statutory, the claimed invention must be within the technological arts. Mere ideas in the abstract (i.e., abstract idea, law of nature, natural phenomena) that do not apply, involve, use or advance the technological arts fail to promote the "progress of science and the useful arts" (i.e., the physical sciences as opposed to social sciences, for example) are found to be non-statutory subject matter. For a process claim to pass muster, the recited process must somehow apply, involve, use, or advance the technological arts. In the present case, claims 1-10 do not recite any structure or functionality to suggest that a computer performs the recited claims. Thus, claims 1-10 are rejected as being directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Art Unit: 3628

Conclusion

3. Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to Frantzy Poinvil whose telephone number is (703) 305-9779. The examiner can normally be reached on Monday-Thursday 7:00AM-5:30PM.
